Sys Toolbox Pro is a simple-to-use application designed for advanced computer users who want to know technical details about their machines. The installation operation finishes in no time and does not require special input from the user. Make sure to run the executable file with administrative privileges, though. Computer information is immediately shown at initialization. Some modules require you to reload data by clicking a button. You can view the machine and device name, bits per pixels, OS full name, platform and version, as well as user identification, authentication and authentication type. In addition, you can check out available disk space on each drive (local and removable) along with names, serial numbers and file system types, view total physical and available memory, local and GMT time, network details (IP address, local IPv6 address), together with CPU serial number, time stamp counter and calculated clock speed. It is possible to terminate currently running processes, add or remove apps which automatically run at system startup, and view BIOS details. Unfortunately, Sys Toolbox Pro does not provide options for copying any of the information to the Clipboard, exporting it to file, or printing it for further scrutiny. The application has a good response time and runs on a very low amount of CPU and RAM, so it does not affect the computer's overall performance or interfere with the runtime of other active processes. No error dialogs were shown in our tests, and the app did not hang or crash. All in all, Sys Toolbox Pro fetches useful information when it comes to the inner workings of the computer, and allows users to terminate active processes as well as manage autostart entries in a comfortable environment.
