Tailor-made Instructions For Using.Which is better at predicting fluid responsiveness in patients with septic shock? To determine which set of variables should be chosen to predict fluid responsiveness in the presence of septic shock. Prospective cohort study. ICU at a tertiary hospital. A total of 44 ICU patients with septic shock for whom venous samples were available for analysis of hemodynamic changes were enrolled. None. Markers of fluid responsiveness (central venous pressure, right atrial pressure, change in CVP [DeltaCVP], pulse pressure variation, VE collapsibility index, and esophageal Doppler tracing). Patients were fluid responsive (group 1) or nonresponsive (group 2) to volume expansion. Analysis of the variance model showed that: (1) tissue Doppler pulsed wave systolic velocity is the best
