You need to use the functions `/System/Library/CoreServices/CoreTypes.s.bundle/Contents/MacOS/CoreTypes` Get the path of the folder `/System/Library/CoreServices/CoreTypes.s.bundle/Contents/MacOS/CoreTypes` to programmatically You have to use the function `system_get_library_path_name`, I have found some code somewhere which indicates that a DMG file is used for the `CoreTypes.bundle`, which should be a shell script. You have to use this shell script, and extract the bundle. I have found a URL to a sh shell script that seems to be the `CoreTypes.bundle`. So there is a possibility to use this shell script. You can find this files here: If you look inside, you see that the bundle contains an executable named `coreTypes.sh`: I have made this executable executable. Now we can use this executable. But you need root access for this. The executable is found inside the CoreTypes.bundle in the folder: `$ /System/Library/CoreServices/CoreTypes.bundle/Contents/MacOS/CoreTypes` CoreTypes.bundle is only a DMG file, but you can extract the contents and then there is the shell script. The shell script is the following: You have to use the function `system_get_library_path_name`, You can open the script or you can execute it: `sh CoreTypes.bundle/Contents/MacOS/CoreTypes` If we execute the shell script, you get that the shell script does nothing with the parameters. But if you go to the folder and delete `coreTypes.sh`, you get an error message like this: What should we do now? `d0c515b9f4`
