The episode is similar to the ending of Batman: Dark Knight Returns, in that it ends with Batman's apparent demise, only to be revived later in the series as an actual ghost. But this particular example has an added twist, which makes the situation a bit more maddening: Batman is killed in the process. ....

hellomansgame forum cryostasis sleep of reason crack 16 michael says -It appears the wait isn't over for a new season of "Homeland" but that doesn't mean the wait for more hype should begin soon. Showtime has released the first image for season three, and it looks like Carrie may be headed to a foreign country. The teaser is more of a teaser of our hopes than an actual snippet of what's to come. It's a heavily-edited version of a photo Carrie took while on a skiing trip in the Alps. Carrie is giving us a sweet look, and it looks like she's either in a fancy ski resort or just hanging out at a ski resort. We'll have more info on the new season once the official release airs in April.

U.S. Stocks to Watch - October 8 Online retail giant Overstock.com (OSTK) is rumored to be a bidder for the company behind the website Shopzilla. (THROUGH Oct. 8) (Fili Saggi, Bloomberg) NEW YORK (CNMoney.com) -- U.S. stocks slipped on Monday, partly because of a weak credit spread and the expiration of a short-covering rally. Investors continued to remain jittery about the unfolding credit crunch and its aftermath in the financial sector. The latest evidence of the volatility in the financial markets came when one of the largest banks in the United States, Northern Trust (NTI), said it is now planning to cut its dividend payout and reduce its stock buyback program. But the banks have pushed up stock prices recently, leaving the long-term declines in prices from last year mostly intact. For example, the Dow Jones industrial average has declined about 3% from last year's highs, but the S&P 500 has only fallen about 2%. The Dow has plunged nearly 8% since its highest closing level on July 7. The S&P 500 is currently up about 5% from its July highs and it is just below the February high, but many analysts don't think it will be able to breach the 2008 highs. "The banks have been providing some strong support and the rally has driven the market higher, so that is good and it leaves the downside limited," said Peter Tuz, president of Chase Investment Counsel Inc. All three major U.S. stock indices
