A: I think the problem is with the thechpwn/autopwn code... It is trying to write itself into the executable instead of the memory area to be freed. I believe the code was changed in the commit that introduced the error. I have not downloaded the latest code since it was updated. .class Landroid/support/design/widget/LinearLayoutCompat$AutoLayoutManagerCompat; .super Ljava/lang/Object; # direct methods .method constructor ()V .locals 0 invoke-

A: Your function is returning the "where Clause" from your stored procedure as a string. [Update] Here's the problem - don't display a message if the user provided a valid email address. From the screenshots it looks like the user entered an email address that doesn't match the criteria of the where clause of the stored procedure. The error message you provide for this is very generic, you should change it to be more specific. For example, you should check against a list of the email addresses that the user can have - something like emailAddress IN ('Username@example.com', 'Username@example.net', 'Username@examples.com') That will show you if the email address is valid, and you can use the emailAddress that the user input instead of username. The example below will handle this case. First, change your stored procedure to be like this: ALTER PROCEDURE [dbo].[usp_FindUserByEmail] @emailAddress nvarchar(100) AS BEGIN SELECT @emailAddress as emailAddress END Then in your function, handle the case where an invalid email address is provided: CREATE FUNCTION dbo.FindUserByEmail @emailAddress nvarchar(100) = NULL RETURNS @Result table AS RETURN SELECT @emailAddress as emailAddress FROM (SELECT Users.userid ,Users.firstname ,Users.lastname ,Users.username ,Users.email ,Users.password ,Users.password_verify ,Users.is_active ,Users.gender ,Users.status ,Users.address_line_1 ,Users.address_line_2 ,Users.city ,Users.state ,Users.zip ,Users.country ,Users.number ,Users.phone_1 ,Users.phone_2 ,Users.phone_3

,Users.phone_4 ,Users.phone_extension_1
,Users.phone_extension_2
,Users.phone_extension_3 ,Users.phone_
