The Galactic Lander helps kids learn about astronomy and geography while they play. Learn about the distance to the nearest star, other planets, galaxies and even the Sun. For an optional challenge - become the very first to "walk" on the surface of the Moon! Choose from 3 different size moons, and 20 different planets all with their own unique sizes and shapes. Play as either a robotic robot (green moon) or a furry plant creature (red moon). Learn about gravity, different types of moons and planets (including ice balls, comets, and meteorites) as you follow the 10 steps of each game (one for each day of the year). How to play (from Help&Tutorial/Stuff) Step 1: Tap the screen to move the purple robot ball. Step 2: Reach the planet or moon to complete the level. Step 3: Complete each level over 10 times to get a yellow bar and open up the next level. Step 4: Complete all levels to get the final bar and the name of the day printed in the corner. Step 5: Look around on the surface of each level. Note if there is anything you want to jump off of, even if it is a black surface. Step 6: After you jump, you will see any switches. If you touched one switch, it will come to life. Step 7: Choose a switch and press it to activate it. Step 8: Press the direction that you want to go. When you are moving in a direction the purple ball will rotate to the new direction. Step 9: When you reach a spot where there is no direction you can go, you will go back to the planet or moon. Step 10: To continue on to the next level, you must go back to the first level to repeat the steps. Features 3D top-down view and its cast of memorable characters, each with their own special weapons, spells and abilities, living in a strange world, filled with traps, enemies and very few ways of getting out. Gameplay Torako is a top-down side-scrolling fighting game in which you will fight a very specific set of enemies in the side-scrolling view. Each of these enemies has his own special attacks and abilities to fight. How you defeat each enemy will determine how you defeat the next one and the next one... Reviews Everything was more brutal and stylish than you might expect from a 2D, yet quite loose, platformer. Platformer It will be extremely difficult to be one of the coolest people to appear on our pre-release list. Monster Bowl can be very difficult at times, with a mixture of awesome platforming and puzzles. At other times, it can also be a very simple game. Gameplay Control-wise, the controls are incredibly intuitive. This is still a fairly unique game, though, with our main character eating a weird cake. You can control him by choosing one of four motions - up/down/left/right - or you can have him move automatically. Reviews Abbey Road is a hidden object game that's as approachable as it is complex. There's so much going on in this game that it can take a little while to get into the meat of it. If you can get past the initial learning curve, you'll be rewarded with a world brimming with details and scenes that'll have you grinning for days. Features Abbey Road is about a young widow and her four friends who are trying to help her get over the loss of her husband. They travel from place to place, trying to solve puzzles, uncover clues and learn things about themselves along the way. And there are all these characters - a family of four (mother, father, two girls and a boy) who need help, a robot that looks like a mover from The Jetsons, an adorable talking dragon and a bunch of people dressed as owls. There are all kinds of things to do and see, and there are lots of ways to do and see it. And not all of the scenes will make sense to you at first. You'll figure it all out as you play. But what will happen when you decide to explore? When you explore, you'll find this game. Platform The PS2 version has approximately the same amount of stuff in it. The Vita version does

What's new in Tiger Fighter 1931 Tora! MP036:

Murakami launched the Tiger Fighter in 1935, and the following year celebrated the sale of its 100,000th example, a cause for great satisfaction. The aircraft had been designed and manufactured to the quality level of which the firm was capable, combining affordability, good looks and no stray metal fittings. It was proof that, despite modern technology and mass production, quality could still be achieved at a price the vast majority of the population could afford. When the Tiger Fighter was put into serial production, there was still a twenty four month wait between purchase and delivery of a new aircraft. This matched the results of the French Morane MS.1001 and, soon afterwards, the First World War Sopwith Triplane. The Tiger Fighter was an astonishingly well packaged product, complete with a hand-written catalogue and motorising instructions. Surprisingly, it was also a well designed aircraft. This 1935 Tiger Fighter is on loan from the Musée de l'Air d'Epinal. Jean-Marc Ruhlmann is one of the few Tiger Pilots to own a Tiger, and so is delighted with this chance to present this vintage machine at Flying Nights Club. Tiger Fighter Images Tiger Fighter History "The Tiger Fighter is one of the most attractive and functional aeroplanes to have ever been produced. It has no bad features whatsoever, other than the basic weakness of an aeroplane of its size: it is a very light aeroplane. In short, there are no superfluous parts in the Tiger Fighter, which has been perfectly tested and re-engineered." Jose de los Reyes, 1935 Production of the Tiger Fighter first started in 1932, at the end of the decade, as a response to popular demand. Kurita Production Company had taken over the Tiger Aircraft Company (the original operators of the Tiger-Aeroplane) and manufactured all-new Tiger Fighters to a price of under £1750. Until then, the Tiger had been something of a swansong for the Kurita Company, after which its range would be taken over by other manufacturers, such as Nakajima of Japan. The quality of the Tiger, however, had apparently been so excellent that the firm intended continuing to manufacture and sell the “anti-extravagant” sub-£2000 fighter. In fact, an engraving on the fuselage of the series production model, of 1931, shows the date in two languages, “19
