As the name suggests, you'll be able to see every detail of your player on the pitch thanks to the new HyperMotion Technology. The aim of the new system is to give you a completely new viewing experience on the new TV mode, which can be activated on both the PlayStation 4 Pro or PlayStation 4. The updated engine also aims to bring Real Player Motion to the next level, using artificial intelligence that is more nuanced than ever. This was our initial interview with Stefan Buchner (Senior Gameplay Producer) on FIFA 22, who shows us around the new menus and gameplay features to give you a better understanding of the changes and improvements coming in FIFA 22. The PlayStation Blog: So first of all, what are the big focus points for FIFA 22? Stefan Buchner: The most important thing is the new engine, which is the heart of the game. It has a lot of new features and it should look completely new to you. PlayStation Blog: What does it mean for the player? How much better will it be? Stefan Buchner: It should look completely new to you. You will see great results especially in regards to player movements, positioning, interaction and the job done by your players. It should be really nice to see and to play with. PlayStation Blog: New engine or new gaming experience? Stefan Buchner: Both. Because of the new engine, you will be able to see every single detail. You will be able to understand every single movement, every tackle, every duel and even every touch with the ball. It should be really great to see, and it will also feel different. PlayStation Blog: Do you have any real-life players that you've used as a benchmark for the new engine, just in terms of their movement? Stefan Buchner: Yes, we use 22 real-life players. The most important one is the goalkeeper. Every player is in the studio because we were only able to get him to a limited extent due to his work commitments. He plays pretty much the whole game and that's the one who is used as a benchmark. PlayStation Blog: FIFA 22 is going to have a new user interface, so how is that going to work? Stefan Buchner: It's pretty easy and straightforward. We're using a more classic and classical HUD, even though you can choose from a
