It is a real time strategy game where you need to control the army and use the army to conduct the war. Overview. In order to control a city, you need to spend money on improving the many buildings that the city has. Different buildings give different benefits to the city, and if you want to win the game, you need to use various buildings. Many buildings give special bonuses. You may want to build a carpenter's building, so you can build more houses. If you want to build a pottery, you may want to construct a stone mine so you can mine ore. Just as important as the buildings is the army you have. Building up your army will help you do better on the war map. One thing you need to remember about the war map is that it has a central area with five lanes. One of these lanes is the main road, which goes around the central area. Each lane has a fortress at its end, and two of them are on the sides of the war map. Each of the lanes serves as a road. You can see how many tiles lie on the side of each lane. The tiles that lie on the side of the lane, but not near the fortress, are owned by enemies. If the enemy army comes down that lane, that tile belongs to them and they own it. But, if you own that tile, you can use it to stop the enemy's army from coming down the lane. So you need to consider what tiles you want to own and how to get them. If you can occupy them for yourself, you can stop the enemy army from taking them. During the last twenty-four hours there have been reports of four suicides due to hyperthermia. The first occurred in Lewisburg, West Virginia when a 23-year-old man left a suicide note in his mother's email saying he "got so hot he felt like God would need to take him out of this world." The second involved a 50-year-old man in Haefeli, North Dakota. The man set himself on fire and left a note that read "let's do it!" before he died. The third involved a young woman who set herself on fire outside of a high school in Spokane, Washington. The fourth was a high school teacher who committed suicide by hanging himself in the high school bathroom. Five suicide cases due to hyperthermia occurred within 24 hours between the West Virginia, North Dakota, Spokane, Washington, and North Carolina cases. All reported symptoms were consistent with heat stroke. In the Washington case the student had been on restriction for fighting which may have preceded his death. Hyperthermia can occur at any age and in any environment. In the U.S. it is most commonly associated with the hot summer months, especially between May and September. The most effective way to prevent hyperthermia and other heat-related deaths is to stay safe during hot days and nights. Staying indoors, wearing loose, light clothing with a light color, wearing a hat, and drinking plenty of water can decrease
